Junge, attributes, and always believed you did right in shooting that fellow."

"Why in the d-l then, didn't you tell the jury so?" asked the Colonel jesting-

"A-h!" exclaimed the Judge, and both laughed over the Incident.

"The saddest event of the war to me," said Colonel Mosby, "was the death of my brave cousin, Jim Wyatt, at Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864. He was captain of the Albemarle Arillery, and a nobler, truer soldier never lived."

After the war, Colonel Mosby turned the attontion to law and practiced at the California bar. He was highly esteemed by all the Federal officers for his bravery and gallant bearing as a soldier. Colonel Mosby was appointed in 1875 consul to Hong Kong by President Hayes, and, while there, met with General Grant in his tour around the world. We give a good picture of "Tudor Grove," which was sold in 1854, to Colonel Northrop, who was commissary general on President Jeff Davis's staff, and the place was never visited by the Federal troops. A good likeness is also presented of Colonel Mosby, as he appeared during the war.

"Times-Dispatch.—I wish to know relationship, if any, between Richard Harris, Burgess from Hanover county, Va., 1723-26, and Robert Harris, Burgess from same county, 1735-44."

Answer—It is said that there were thirty-six families of the name of Harris to come, ever to this country, none of the thirty-six being related, so it is not probable that the above were related. In our next we will give the lineal descent of Major Robert Harris, who came from Wales between 1650 and 1650, who settled in Hanover county. Perhaps some of
